

Micheal Mooney

Positioning: Leadership that holds when systems are under strain.

Systems leadership • Ethics • Public trust • Infrastructure • Technology

I measure impact by whether the system holds after I step away.

Short bio

Micheal Mooney is a systems-level leader working at the intersection of infrastructure, governance, technology, and human consequence. He has led in complex, high-stakes environments across public, private, and nonprofit sectors, with a focus on building accountable systems, strengthening public trust, and embedding ethics into decision-making. His work is grounded in practical delivery and governance discipline, and shaped by lived experience navigating systems that do not always work as designed.
